"As an Open Source platform, Drupal suits us in a number of ways. Drupal is the result of a passionate community, which I believe is aligned with how our senators view their work with their constituents. With no licensing costs, we feel that we are being responsible with limited taxpayer resources. We're indebted to Drupal.org and all of the members contributing to the Drupal community—so much so that we are contributing our own patch fixes and modules, so that others may benefit from the investment we have made. It's very satisfying to be able to give back to a platform that is serving us so well."

—Andrew Hopkin, Chief Information Officer at New York State Senate
